Revolutionizing IBD management: the power of intestinal and transperineal ultrasound

June 11th, 2025 – from 4.00 pm to 6.00 pm

Scientific Rationale

Intestinal ultrasound (IUS) and transperineal ultrasound (TPUS) are revolutionizing the personalized management of inflammatory bowel diseases (IBD).

These non-invasive, real-time imaging techniques are transforming the way clinicians assess disease activity, postoperative recurrence, and therapeutic response—offering a safer, more patient-friendly alternative to traditional endoscopic evaluations.

This webinar will explore how IUS and TPUS are redefining IBD care, from their prognostic potential to their role in guiding treatment decisions.

We will also address key challenges, including the learning curve for clinicians and the integration of ultrasound into routine practice. As these innovations continue to evolve, they are set to become indispensable tools in the era of precision medicine for IBD.
